

H. Ward Camp

Ward Camp is vice president of regulatory and energy policy at Landis+Gyr North America, where he oversees regulatory and legislative matters. His focus spans the regulatory and policy aspects of changing electricity standards pertaining to smart metering and disaggregated electricity markets. For the first 17 years of his career he practiced law representing electric utilities, gas distribution companies and intrastate and interstate gas pipelines. During the last 13 years he has served as an executive dealing with advanced metering regulatory issues. He received his Juris Doctor from the University of Oklahoma.